> IMPORTANT NOTICE: nutritional information (calories, carbohydrates, protein, and fat) is an estimate per serving, calculated from the ingredient list and food-composition tables. Values vary by brand, ingredient size, and equipment. This book is educational and does not replace advice from a physician or registered dietitian. People with diabetes, kidney disease, pregnant or breastfeeding people, and anyone taking continuous medication should consult a qualified professional before adopting a carbohydrate-restricted eating pattern. Erythritol and xylitol are safe for most people in moderate amounts; excess may cause digestive discomfort. Xylitol is toxic to dogs — keep desserts away from pets.

Welcome to Your Low-Carb Kitchen

You did not buy a diet book. You bought 50 ready-to-use answers to the question that can derail any eating routine: “What should I cook today?”.

Low carb does not mean living on sad salads. It means enjoying a creamy omelet, a lasagna you can slice, a Sunday feijoada, and even cheesecake — swapping refined flour and sugar for ingredients that satisfy, without cooking two separate meals.

Every recipe was selected for three reasons: easy-to-find ingredients, realistic time for busy people, and leftovers that solve tomorrow’s meal.

> The golden rule of this book: carbohydrates are accents, not the foundation. They add flavor and color — tomato, carrot, fruit — while the foundation is always protein, good fat, and vegetables.

Cook one new recipe a day for seven weeks and you will have a repertoire that can rescue any Monday. Enjoy.

How to Use This Book

1. Start at the end. Check the “7-Day Menu” bonus and the shopping list before going to the store. Cooking without a plan is the fastest way to order takeout on Thursday.

2. Double the right recipe. Most lunch and dinner recipes make two servings: the second becomes tomorrow’s lunch.

3. Use the boxes. Each recipe includes a Cooking Tip and a Smart Swap to help you adapt without leaving the low-carb approach.

4. Do not chase zero carbs. The nutritional numbers are there to help you choose, not to turn food into a prison.

5. Freeze with confidence. Recipes with freezing notes were designed for individual portions and sealed containers.

Substitutions That Save Any Pantry

Low carb is also a game of smart swaps. Keep this table handy:

| Remove | Use instead | Note |
|---|---|---|
| Refined sugar | Erythritol or xylitol | 1:1; xylitol is slightly sweeter |
| Wheat flour | Almond flour + 1 egg | use half the amount; egg provides structure |
| White rice | Riced cauliflower | sauté raw over high heat for 5–6 minutes |
| Pasta | Zucchini, hearts of palm, or konjac | sauté for 90 seconds to 3 minutes |
| Potato | Cauliflower, turnip, or roasted radish | for mash and broths; use pumpkin moderately |
| Prepared sauce | Peeled tomatoes + seasoning | simmer over low heat for 20 minutes |
